Thank you for your interest in the nursing program at GGC.

School of Health Sciences
Bachelor of Science, Nursing

The Georgia Gwinnett College School of Health Sciences and its approved nursing program will be housed in its new, state-of-the-art, $30 million Allied Health and Sciences Building, to be completed for the fall 2014 semester.
The School of Health Sciences at Georgia Gwinnett College in Lawrenceville, Georgia, offers programs which prepare students to be engaged professionals and leaders in global health. Students in health science programs are equipped with vital competencies necessary to provide evidence-based care and to be leaders in a dynamic and complex health care system.

An integrated educational experience, with use of technology, offers students the opportunity to work within inter-professional teams and further develop their intellectual, physical, emotional, spiritual, social and occupational dimensions. Programs emphasize the importance of high academic standards, integrity, ethics, social responsibility, and lifelong learning in global health care.

Georgia Gwinnett College’s School of Health Sciences will be recognized as a premier provider of health care professionals for the community.

Nursing Program Vision

The GGC bachelor of science in nursing will be a dynamic, competitive program dedicated to preparing students for the wide variety of nursing opportunities in the health care field. New, modern facilities and partnerships with community health care organizations will provide real-world clinical experiences that enhance learning. GGC's hallmark of faculty/student mentorship will infuse the college's nursing program with a unique level of engagement and interaction.

The charter nursing class will begin fall 2014. Please consult the School of Health Sciences website at www.ggc.edu for updates on the application process and deadline.
