There are several areas of concentration within an Masters in Public Health Program including: Environmental Health, Biostatistics, Epidemiology, General Public Health, International Public Health Management, Social and Behavioral Sciences, Disaster and Emergency Preparedness, and Public Health Policy and Management. Each concentration has different recommendations in addition to the ones listed above. Please check with the individual program coordinators to request additional information. |

Students are strongly advised to check with the program they plan to apply to for specific prerequisites.

What factors are considered in admissions to Public Health programs?

1. All Masters and Doctoral programs in Public Health require a Baccalaureate degree. Although B.A. (versus B.A.) are viewed favorably because recommended courses have been taken, admissions are not exclusive to those with a B.S.
2. Standard application materials. These include transcripts, a resume or CV, and a Statement of Purpose.
4. The overall GPA. Grades for all undergraduate coursework attempted are included in the calculation of the overall undergraduate GPA. A minimum cumulative grade point average of 3.0 on a 4.00 scale is recommended. (varies by school)
5. Scores on the GRE or MCAT of 50th percentile, average at some schools 70th percentile.
